Pastoral Administrator's Column - July 21, 2024

JESUS, OUR GOOD SHEPHERD

Dear Friends in Christ,

Grace and peace of Jesus Christ be with you! Today's first reading is a series of oracles delivered by the Prophet Jeremiah against the unworthy shepherds who had led God's people astray. He spoke against Judokas (22:10-12), Jehoiakim (22:13-19) and Jeconiah (22:20-30), the next false shepherd in chronological order would have been Zedekiah.

Ephesians 2:13-18 is called the theological core of the Letter to the Ephesians. Today's second reading is part of a longer section (2:1-22) in which the author expounds upon the benefits made available to both gentiles ("you") and Jews ("we") in Christ.

The Gospel reading today serves as an introduction to the next long section of Mark's gospel, the double version of the feeding of the multitudes. Shepherdless sheep were a frequent motif in the Old Testament signifying the needs of the people for leadership, security, sustenance and healing.

It is the ideal of true and good shepherding to which Jesus ascribed and with which he associated his ministry and that of his apostles.

May we have the same compassion as Jesus when we look at the world around us. Let us strive to be shepherds to them, just as Jesus is to us, and help them to realize their full potential.

Have an amazing Sunday and a blessed week!
